Engineering Experience

Guest Researcher involved in HEART project

Kiel - Germany

CHRISTIAN-ALBRECHTS-UNIVERSITÄT ZU KIEL

January 2018 - June 2018

He was a scientific staff member of Chair of Power Electronics of University of Kiel, headed by Prof. Marco Liserre. He was involved in the project "the Highly Efficient And Reliable smart Transformer (HEART), a new Heart for the Electric Distribution System". His researches deal with control of Smart Transformer-Fed Grid with high penetration of renewable energies. Particular attention is posed on the phenomenon of Harmonic Instability caused by frequency couplings, interaction between power converters, computation and transmission delays. NonLinear control, robust control, distributed control, parameter estimation applied to power electronic based power systems are object of the research.

Personal Information

ABOUT ME

I always have a mathematical approach to engineering problems and I like to see how abstract maths takes shape in real systems. I like to find relationships among apparently far topics and to observe the same problem under several points of view. I love music, cinema and art. I like nature, therefore I practice sports like ski, jogging, mountain biking and sea swimming. In the past I have practiced several team sports like football, basketball, volleyball, handball. I love to travel and meet new people.
